

Village of North Palm Beach

"The Best Place to Live Under the Sun"

MARCH 2016

A Message from Village Manager Jim Kelly

Dear Residents,

I want to thank everyone who participated in our online survey or group meetings regarding the Country Club and the interviews and week-long Charrette regarding the Village Master Plan. Village residents showed their community spirit and desire to help our Village Council make important decisions about the future of North Palm Beach.

The Master Plan presentation on February 5, 2016 was a summary of the “Work in Progress” to date. There is still a lot of work to do before a draft is presented to the Village Council in May of 2016. The Master Plan is simply a plan of how the Village intends to handle the inevitable future changes inside and outside of our Village. Changes will occur with or without a plan. With a plan, changes that will maintain the quality of life of our residents and the future sustainability of our Village will be enhanced, and changes that may be detrimental to our village can be avoided.

By the time you receive this newsletter, the village Council will probably have determined the scope of work for the Country Club Clubhouse and pool area. If so, then our Architects at Peacock & Lewis are busy designing our new Clubhouse! A tentative completion date for the Clubhouse is December 2018.

Stay tuned to the Village website (www.village-npb.org) to view details and status updates about the Country Club and Master Plan.

Two tentative workshops are planned for this month after our regularly scheduled Council Meetings:

- 1) March 20, 2016—Villages 10 Year Capital Budget
- 2) April 14, 2016—Sanitation Services

Lastly, Heritage Day is April 2, 2016, This year we celebrate our 60th Anniversary. We have a great parade and events scheduled for you to enjoy!

Sincerely,
Jim Kelly

POLICE DEPT. TIPS

The North Palm Police Department along with other law enforcement agencies has experienced issues with thieves targeting outboard motors, specifically outboard motor lower units. This type of theft is a unique circumstance for

Law Enforcement because lower end units are difficult to identify. A majority of the time lower end units are changed post the manufacturing of the outboard motor. When a theft occurs, the owners of these outboard motors rarely maintain proper records.

The North Palm Beach Police Department would like to encourage residents to assist in protecting their property by securing vessel engines, lower units, and propellers with locks. This will deter thieves and prevent them from stealing your property with a set of hand tools. These locks can be purchased online or at local marine supply stores. It is also recommended that boat owners add an owner applied number (OAN) to the lower end units and keep a list of identifiable markings such as serial and model numbers.

Open Letter to Seacoast Utility Authority Customers Concerning Recent Flint, Michigan Water Supply Issues

Recent news out of Flint, Michigan reminds us that as critical as safe drinking water is to public health, a public water supply utility's operational transparency and clarity are equally important. To that end, as the owner and operator of the public water supply, treatment, pumping and piping systems serving Lake Park, North Palm Beach, Palm Beach Gardens, the south end of Juno Beach, and nearby unincorporated areas, Seacoast is pleased to explain why the difficulties plaguing Flint's water supply do not exist locally. I'll start by directing attention to the following two documents:

A timeline published by Treatment Plant Operator magazine relating to Flint's water supply issues, and Seacoast's most recent "Consumer Confidence Report" posted on Seacoast's website, www.sua.com, at <http://www.sua.com/files/2014ccr.pdf>

Specifically addressing the Flint, Michigan issue, it is essential to note some fundamental differences between that system and Seacoast's. Primary among these is the difference in source water. Flint's problems, at least the most publicized ones, seem to be related to the fact that the City's current raw water source is a river. This typically means that it contains material swept up and sometimes dissolved in runoff (drainage) which can be quite challenging to remove in the treatment plant, particularly one beset with fiscal issues. Further, river water can be aggressive, meaning that if it is not properly stabilized or buffered in the treatment plant before release to the public, it will tend to corrode metallic pipeline and plumbing. Aggressive, unstable water can cause lead and copper leaching from plumbing joints and fixtures into the water supply as well as other highly undesirable impacts. In this regard, it is important to note that as in many older water utilities, many of the service lines connecting Flint's water mains to customer plumbing are made of lead – a condition which does not exist within Seacoast's service area.

Seacoast on the other hand, draws its raw water from 38 wells averaging 150 ft. in depth plus 3 wells approximately 1,500 feet deep. Local runoff cannot find its way to well pump intakes at those depths. So while Seacoast's source water is highly mineralized, it contains none of the offensive material that one might find in the storm water runoff to many rivers, particularly those running through densely populated industrial areas. Further, Seacoast's local ground (well) water supply tends to be less aggressive than most surface waters, a fact confirmed by local lead and copper test results that are consistently within federal, state and local drinking water standards. The Consumer Confidence Report provides additional detail.

Finally, though the oldest of Seacoast's water distribution pipelines have been in service for about 60 years, regular visual inspection performed by engineers and licensed operators reveal no signs of interior deterioration. In addition to its well-buffered ground water source, Seacoast's newly commissioned, state of the art reverse osmosis/nanofiltration water treatment plant is operated around the clock by highly experienced and licensed water treatment plant operators whose careers depend upon providing a consistently safe, stable, non-corrosive finished water to Seacoast's customers. Further, Seacoast's 484 miles of water distribution piping, 3,500 fire hydrants and 7,200 valves are inspected and maintained on a regular schedule which includes line flushing, valve and hydrant maintenance and marking, and timely replacement of infrastructure that is approaching the end of its useful life.

Much of this information, plus Seacoast's capital budget and much, much more can be accessed at www.sua.com. In short, Seacoast is blessed with a higher quality raw water source than Flint's appears to be, is properly funded, professionally operated, and highly responsive to customer questions and concerns. I hope that this addresses any concerns you may have, but if more detail is required, Seacoast will be pleased to provide it.
